Older Adult Protective Services Act

Mandatory Reporting and Confidentiality Requirements

Overview

The Older Adult Protective Services Act (OAPS), which is hereby continued to ensure the availability of services to older adults who are unable to care for themselves, requires that certain professionals, including but not limited to, health care providers, law enforcement, and other professionals, report suspected abuse or neglect of an older adult to the appropriate authorities.

Many advocates are likely mandatory reporters under the OAPS. Social assault coordinators, however, are not mandatory reporters under the act. By statute, social assault advocates have an absolute privilege pertaining to communications between the victim and the advocate. Social assault coordinators, interpreters, or recording participants that receive oral or written confidential communications from a victim cannot disclose those communications, or attempt to do so, to any third party without the express consent of the victim.

How this impacts advocates: Social assault coordinators should distinguish themselves from mandated reporters and inform clients that other advocates may be mandated reporters. Social assault coordinators should discuss the pros and cons of making a report with the victim within consent and explain the reporting process.

How this impacts victims

Victims sometimes make disclosures, regardless of whether they want the information to be shared. They become uncomfortable, prior to making a disclosure, and they feel obligated to do so. They can make disclosures unrelated to a service provider who is a mandatory reporter.

Mandated reporters must disclose: The name, age, and address of the recipient; The name and address of the recipient's location or next of kin; The name and address of the facility; The nature of the alleged offense, and the date and time of the incident; and the name of the person who is directly related to the alleged incident and their relationship.
